KNOCK THREE TIMES AND ASK FOR 'BAMBI'

Bootleggers who sell illegal videocassettes are becoming the scourge of the movie business

By Neil Hickey

Hordes of FBI agents, about 400 of them, descended like Visigoths on 30 businesses in 10 states last Feb. 14. The carefully timed and coordinated attacks brought scores of arrests and established for the first time that organized crime has moved quietly into a whole new area of racketeering: video-tape piracy.

That "sting" came after two and a half years of careful undercover work, during which FBI agents posed as buyers and sellers of bootlegged movies. "We now know," an FBI man told TV GUIDE, "that video piracy has moved out of its initial stage as the province of small-time operators and semiprofessionals to where the Mob is also involved in a big way. It had to happen, I suppose. The potential profits are enormous and the risks are fairly small."

The crime of video-tape piracy itself is a whole new form of skulduggery, the illegitimate offspring of the emerging "video revolution" and the traditional movie business: hundreds of millions of dollars a year, says the Motion Picture Association of America, are siphoned off from movie-company profits by crooked entrepreneurs—eager freelancers as well as crime kingpins—who make copies of newly released movies and sell them in a thriving black market to anybody with access to a videocassette player.

At one New York City location raided by the FBI on Feb. 14, lawmen found 22 video-tape machines grinding out copies of "Kramer vs. Kramer" around the clock. In other cities, they confiscated copies of "Apocalypse Now," "The Deer Hunter," "Star Wars," "Grease," "Rocky II," "Superman," "The Exorcist" and dozens of others, including a number of classic Disney films such as "Pinocchio" and "Bambi." One of the apprehended pirates even had an illegal videocassette of a film ("The Baltimore Bullet") a full six weeks before its release to movie houses.

Video piracy is crime on an international scale. More than 80 countries cooperate in combating it, with the help of agencies such as the FBI, Scotland Yard and Interpol. Last December, the biggest multinational video-piracy bust ever completed netted more than 6000 copies of illegally taped movies ("The China Syndrome," "Moonraker," "Alien," "Hair") in coordinated raids on 13 locations in England and Holland. Tapes flow freely out of such cities as Miami, New York and Houston to Latin America, the Caribbean Islands, Africa, Europe, Singapore, Japan and the Middle East. In some of those locations, the movies show up on television long before they arrive in the local movie theaters, thereby sharply curtailing a film's profitability to its producers. Fidel Castro has boasted that he sees pirated tapes of American movies at the same time they open in U.S. theaters.

Saudi Arabia is an especially fertile market for tape pirates because it's the only country in the world with no movie houses, and its television service offers mostly cultural and religious programs. Wealthy Saudis have a highly developed appetite for first-run American movies and are able to buy the most sophisticated playback equipment, as well as tapes by the hundreds. Also, the thousands of Americans employed by U.S. corporations in Saudi Arabia are starved for entertainment, and bootlegged American movies that can be played in their homes solve that recreation problem nicely.

Video-tape piracy "lurks like some dark, ominous shadow" over the movie business, says Motion Picture Asso- → ciation president Jack Valenti. Every criminal element in the country is studying home video as a fertile new happy-hunting ground for chicanery, he maintains. This year, Americans will spend more than $100 million for video tapes (prerecorded and blank) and, according to one estimate, roughly half of the prerecorded purchases will be pirated copies. And the marketplace is destined to expand dramatically. Right now, only about a million video-tape players are in use in the U.S., but by 1985 as many as one-third of all TV homes probably will have them.

How does the bootlegged-tape traffic work? Dishonest studio employees smuggle unreleased movies to pirates, who duplicate them overnight and return the prints before they're missed. Similarly, projectionists in movie theaters are bribed to lend a film print for the few hours necessary to make a copy. New movies shown on pay-cable channels are easily recorded on any home videoplayer, and then just as easily duplicated by the thousands. Other pirates simply make counterfeit copies of movies already legally available in cassette form—films released to the video-tape market by their copyright owners.

From that variety of sources the tapes find their way to retail electronics outlets and record shops, where they're sold under the counter to trusted customers. Floating "video speakeasies" crop up wherever there's a local demand for "hot" movies, and lists of available titles are circulated secretly among video buffs. (Prices are steep for brand-new releases but fall off sharply as copies flood the market. "Star Wars," for example, sold for as much as $1000 a copy in the early weeks of its release but now can be had for as little as $35 to $100.)

Often the FBI infiltrates these piracy rings for a year or more, posing as buyers and sellers of contraband, or using paid informants, and then cracks down in a wave of coordinated raids. Thus, 60 agents hit 15 locations in South Florida last October, arresting 18 men and confiscating tapes and duplicating equipment worth millions; in a simultaneous four-state crackdown last May, agents grabbed thousands of tapes in Maine, North and South Carolina and Florida; regularly, G-men and local police halt and seize huge trucks crammed with illegal tapes, plying the bootlegged-tape trade across state lines.

Second offenders in criminal copyright-infringement cases face penalties up to $50,000 in fines or two years in jail, or both, and the number of such cases pending mounts by the month. The Motion Picture Association of America, which represents most of the major studios, is offering $5000 rewards for information that leads to the conviction of pirates. The MPAA's Film Security Office in New York runs a worldwide watchdog operation under the supervision of James Bouras, the industry's chief antipiracy expert, who employs private investigators to check out reports of piracy rings wherever they crop up in the world, and to develop evidence for law enforcers.

Bouras points out that pirates almost always are in violation of more than just the copyright law and thus can be nailed on several raps: mail fraud, falsifying export documents, fraud by telephone, outright theft, income-tax evasion and interstate transportation of stolen property. The cost of prosecuting these cases is enormous, says Bouras, but the movie industry is willing to do it because of its "tremendous concern" about the effects of piracy on industry profits. "The video revolution is taking off much more rapidly, worldwide, than anyone expected even a few years ago," he says.

Many thousands of Americans, of course, regularly record TV programs off the air—including movies—for later viewing. Are they breaking the law? No, but if they sell or rent the tape, → or charge admission to view it, they then become "perpetrators" and can expect a visit from the fuzz.

As recently as five years ago, the sequence of movie distribution was blessedly simple: movie theaters first, followed by a showing on a TV network, then sale to local TV stations. Then, two and a half years ago, pay-TV injected itself into the sequence right after movie theaters. Now, most movie companies release at least some of their titles to the video-tape market soon after their premiere, giving the producers five bites of the apple instead of just three —but pirates are making it impossible for the producers to swallow and enjoy all five bites.

Twentieth Century-Fox, in 1977, was the first big studio to sell some of its old movies to the public in video-tape form: "Patton," "Hello, Dolly!" "The French Connection," "The Longest Day"—50 titles in all. That revolutionary move has been imitated by other major studios, and today almost 500 movies are legally available on cassettes, including such biggies as "The Godfather," "Saturday Night Fever," "10" and "The Electric Horseman."

But avid movie fans who own video players want new movies (plus such unreleased classics as "Gone with the Wind" and "The Wizard of Oz") and they want them now.

For some, the motivation is the social cachet of owning first-run movies and being able to invite the neighbors over for evenings of blockbuster entertainment; others make a hobby of swapping and reselling cassettes; many simply enjoy the heady luxury of building tape libraries of major movies, past and present, which they can haul off the shelves and play at will.

Even amateur, fly-by-night pirates can make big killings: for a $1500 investment in 100 blank tapes (at $15 each) they can gross a quick $5000 (at $50 per movie), for a tax-free profit of $3500. Multiply that figure a thousandfold and you have a sense of how much can be pocketed regularly by any criminal group that cares to get in on it.

What's the solution to video-tape piracy? Is there a scheme that will stamp it out once and for all? Probably not. The illegal drug traffic thrives, after decades of open warfare upon it. But the drug trade does provide an analogy that may point to a kind of solution: just as the legalization of hard drugs has been touted as a means of forcing the underworld out of the drug traffic, the movie business is now toying with the idea of releasing all future movies to the home-video market (tape and videodisc) when they are released to movie theaters. It would mean that new movies would be available for home use, legally and at reasonable prices, the same day they hit the movie houses.

That solution is so drastic that it overturns the whole economic base on which the movie business was founded more than 75 years ago—namely, that movies are for exhibition to audiences, not for sale to individuals—and it further threatens (as did pay-TV) the future of your neighborhood movie house. But so menacing is the piracy problem that such a solution may be inevitable.

In fact, in March, 20th Century-Fox said that within two years it plans to start doing just that. The announcement angered theater-chain owners and caused other studios to ponder the matter harder. "It'll kill the goose that lays the golden eggs!" yelled one exhibitor, because anybody who buys a tape or disc will show it to five or 50 or 100 people and that'll hurt the box office. "The wrath of theater owners," said Alan Hirschfield, who heads 20th Century-Fox, "won't deter us."

Years ago, when the big movie studios were cranking out all those Errol Flynn-type, skull-and-crossbones, swashbuckling epics of the sea, they never suspected that one day a different kind of pirate would sail forth and set the movie business on its ear. END

Mekka's pilgrimage paid off

At his first audition in Hollywood, Easterner Eddie Mekka fell into a role on Laverne & Shirley

By Ellen Torgerson Shaw

Actors, like the rich, are different from the rest of us. Often, they are more good-looking, more sensitive, more nervous, more neurotic, more insecure —and more egotistical and more arrogant. They also eat less—to keep their bodies planed down and their cheekbones high. They fall in love more frequently and more casually. They worry about their images. They have better memories. They usually begin a sentence with the words "I am . . ." or "I was . . ." or "I will be . . ."

Not all of them, of course. Some of them seem—on the surface anyway—to be as normal as the nicest kid on the block. Eddie Mekka—Carmine Ragusa in Laverne & Shirley—could be taken for a real human being. He is warm and candid and friendly. In the course of being interviewed, he did not once say, "Omigod, don't print that." His only display of nerves was a tendency to hang onto and twist one strand of his plentiful, brown, curly hair. It made him lovable. Not that he doesn't have his actorish traits, though. "I am a delicate person inside," he says. And he would, naturally, like a bigger part; he's weary of having his singing and dancing cut.

"Once the writers found out I could sing and dance, they used it as a crutch to give Carmine something to do," he says. "And that can be cut when they need to make everything fit, since it has nothing to do with the plot." Then he adds, "But I know I'm not the star." Tug. Pull.

When he isn't doing time on the super-hit show, Mekka is on the road, building a second career as a singer in nightclubs, at state fairs, in prisons, mental hospitals and places where underprivileged kids can go to hear him.

One of the reasons Mekka charitably sings for the poor, the sick and the imprisoned is because his own beginnings were poor and his father was ill. Mekka—"I hoped when people heard my name they'd think of Mecca" —was born Edward Rudolph Mekjian in Worcester, Mass., the last of four children. His father, a disabled veteran of World War II, spent much of his time in hospitals. So his mother took over, raising the children on very little money. Mrs. Mekjian worked in a dry-cleaning store as a seamstress, while the kids—two older brothers, a sister and Eddie—worked odd jobs to supplement the family's small income.

Even now, Mrs. Mekjian works. "When she came out here to live, I tried to get her a job at Paramount [where Laverne & Shirley is filmed]," Mekka says. "But she didn't like working in an office. I told her, 'Hey, I'm making good money. Don't work'." But Mrs. Mekjian, unable to overcome the stern habits of a lifetime, looked in the yellow pages for a dry-cleaning establishment and is yet again employed, running the place.

Some of that work ethic rubbed off on her son. Mekka took a job at 12 as a caddy at a local golf club. Like his character Carmine, he's done most of the hard, boring jobs available. He's been a waiter, taxi driver, forklift driver, security guard, factory hand—he moved 200-pound bolts of cloth from here to there—and sold candy at Radio City Music Hall. But despite early ambition, Mekka was a withdrawn, retiring soul.

"Until my senior year in high school, I was a shy guy. But I decided to run for class treasurer. My best friend wrote me a speech. I started saying it, but the words didn't fit me, so I threw it away and said, 'I'm honest. Vote for me'." He won the position and the title of the most popular boy in the senior class. At that time in his life, being a champion gymnast, he thought it would be grand to be a gym teacher. "I thought it would be nice to walk around in a T-shirt and sneakers and make money," he says disarmingly.

But shedding his shy ways was not the only thing of significance that happened to Mekka in his senior year. He fell in love with a girl in his church choir. (Mekka was a serious churchgoer: his grandfather was a priest—"the Reverend Father Mekjian"—in the Armenian Apostolic Church and his father a deacon.) For a while life was rapturous. Then his love affair crumbled. "I took inventory of myself and decided to go to Boston."

Once there, he happened to see "Hello, Dolly!" at a local theater. After the performance, thinking what a swell way to make a living acting was, he went backstage. The first person he bumped into was the stage manager. "I asked him how I could get a part. He told me to get a résumé to him. I said I would, but I didn't know what a résumé was." A swift study, Mekka found out and cobbled up his biography. Shortly thereafter, Mekka received a phone call, and an invitation to audition for a part in a touring production of "Promises, Promises." Scared to death, Mekka did, singing a cappella. He got the part. A month → later, when the show folded. Mekka headed for New York, joining multitudes of out-of-work actors. Then, because he was a gymnast who could act, he was picked for a role in Tom Stoppard's play "Jumpers." "It was like an acting class, working with Jill Clayburgh and Brian Bedford." Gwen Verdon saw the play and came backstage to ask Mekka if he'd be interested in appearing in a revival of "Damn Yankees." He was and he did. "Gosh, a punk from Worcester—and I'm dancing with the queen of Broadway, Gwen Verdon."

Gymnastics had led Mekka straight to dance. He enrolled in a class with a dancer-turned-instructor, Phil Black. "He was like a second father to me, but he kept telling me that I was as fluid as mud."

But Miss Verdon thought Mekka was a good dancer and gave him two pairs of her ex-husband's dancing shoes, since a moneyless Mekka was out at the toes. Her former husband was Bob Fosse, one of Broadway's most illustrious directors, choreographers and dancers. Later in his career, Mekka, seeking a job in a Fosse show, danced for him, wearing the boots Fosse had used in "Pal Joey." Fosse said to Mekka that once he'd had a pair like that. "They're yours," Mekka said. He didn't get the job. Too short.

Success of sorts finally came. Mekka was offered the lead in a musical—a rock opera, "The Lieutenant," based on Lieutenant Calley and the My Lai story. Mekka won a Tony nomination as best actor in a musical. But the show closed within a week.

It was time, Mekka thought, to venture to Hollywood. Lucky Mekka: the first agent he saw took him on. "She asked me for footage on myself. I didn't know what she was talking about." He found out. The agent put in a call to ABC, where Laverne & Shirley was in the development stages, and got him an audition. With so many other candidates lined up before him, Mekka didn't make it to the cameras until 9:30 P.M. "I was so nervous, I broke a lamp and a door. It woke up the cameraman; I think that's why I got the job."

Miss Laverne of the series, Penny Marshall, says Mekka got the job because he's more talented than clumsy. "He's from another world, the New York stage. But we're all a little nuts here. Eddie makes goat noises—or is it sheep noises? Wherever he is, he goes baaaa, baaaa. That's how we find him. And when we find him, we know he won't screw up. He knows his lines."

Certainly Mekka seems to be well liked by his co-workers, although actors questioned about other actors—for publication—nearly always respond with prodigal praise. And while his singing career is apparently going well at state fairs, he does not yet have a contract to record and become another Tony Bennett, one of his heroes. Sometimes he gets depressed: at 27, he obviously feels Heaven can't wait.

He's also having difficulty finding a girl who'll love him for himself, E.R. Mekjian, the punk kid from Worcester. "I'd like to find somebody, but I've stopped looking. I go to discos with my buddies occasionally—unwillingly—and when the girls come up, I don't know if it's me or Eddie Mekka they like."

Probably it's a bit of both. Giggling girls boldly ask for his autograph in the restaurant as he is chatting. That's one sure sign. Still, he does not appear narcissistically involved in his own demi-stardom. His clothes don't reflect Beverly Hills Banal: designer jeans and three neck chains. Of course, he does drive a metallic burgundy $14,000 280ZX 2+2 Datsun. He should be allowed. Maybe it helps to make up for the lonely, frightened childhood years and the interrupted songs on Laverne & Shirley. And people who don't appreciate the fact that he's really good ole Eddie Mekjian underneath it all. END

Somerset Maugham

His career, stretching from Queen Victoria to the Beatles, made him the most popular English writer since Dickens

By Ted Morgan

["Wilson's Reward," based on a story by Somerset Maugham, will be shown by more than 100 television stations across the country during the week of June 21. Check "Sports and Specials" for time and channel.—Ed.]

When Somerset Maugham died in December 1965, at the age of 91, one of the friends who came to pay his respects at his home in the south of France was Lord Boothby, the British politician. As he waited to be shown the body, Boothby reflected that the four Englishmen who had given more pleasure to more people than any others in the 20th century were Charles Chaplin, Noel Coward, P.G. Wodehouse and Maugham.

Maugham thought of himself as a teller of tales, an entertainer. He agreed with Samuel Goldwyn that messages should be delivered by Western Union. He was content if his readers spent a pleasant hour or two in the company of his books, which he produced over an astonishing period of three score and five years. His first, the novel "Liza of Lambeth," was published in 1897, when Maugham was 23 and Queen Victoria was on the throne. His last, an account of his art collecting called "Purely for My Pleasure," came out in 1962, when he was 88, during the reign of the Beatles.

All of his long life, Maugham worked at nothing other than his writing. He never taught at a university. He never took a job on a newspaper. He never applied for a grant. His was a life of disciplined effort and self-reliance.

He came from a family of lawyers, but because of a bad stammer, that career was closed to him. He decided to go to medical school, not because he wanted to practice medicine, but because he felt that as a writer he needed the direct experience of human suffering.

As an intern in the obstetrics ward, he was sent to the Cockney slum of Lambeth to deliver babies. It was there, as he observed the colorful inhabitants of this 19th-century London slum and studied their speech patterns, that he collected the material for his first novel, which was practically a verbatim report on what he had seen and heard.

"Liza of Lambeth" was considered bold for its time, and went into several printings. Critics praised it, and young Maugham felt that his career had been launched. But those whom the gods wish to destroy they first call promising. Maugham's next book was panned, and the one after that was ignored. The frustrated novelist turned to plays, but his manuscripts piled up unread in producers' offices. Maugham, who would become the most popular English novelist since Dickens, had 10 lean years. His confidence was shaken, and he was about to take a job as ship's doctor when he learned that one of his plays had been accepted for the London stage.

The play, "Lady Frederick," had been turned down by 14 producers, who felt that no actress would agree to take the title role. For in one scene, Lady Frederick discourages a young suitor by receiving him in her dressing-room with no makeup on. No actress, the producers reasoned, would agree to appear deliberately unattractive. Finally, one did—Ethel Irving. The play was a hit, and Ethel Barrymore played the role in New York.

Suddenly, Maugham was in demand, and all his rejected plays were produced. His greatest stage success, however, was a play he did not write—the adaptation of his short story "Rain" was by John Colton and Clemence Randolph. It opened in New York in 1922, starring Jeanne Eagels, and ran for 648 performances. At each performance, 750 gallons of water poured down on the stage. "Rain" was filmed three times, with Gloria Swanson, Joan Crawford and Rita Hayworth playing the prostitute Sadie Thompson.

While Maugham continued turning out hit plays, which usually took him about a month to write, he was working on his great autobiographical novel, "Of Human Bondage." This study of a miserable childhood and a destructive love affair was hailed by Theodore Dreiser as a masterpiece. In later years, critics asked why Maugham never again matched the compassion and sincerity of "Bondage," to which he replied: "Because I only had one life."

The love affair in "Of Human Bondage" was based on Maugham's love for another man, who in the novel was turned into a woman. Maugham was primarily homosexual, although he fought that inclination all his life. He married and had a daughter, but abandoned his wife and child to live with an American adventurer named Gerald Haxton, whom he hired as a secretary.

Having depleted the material provided by his own life, Maugham had to look elsewhere. He admitted that he had little imagination, and could only write about a subject once it had been thoroughly researched. This is why he went to Tahiti in 1917, to research the life of Paul Gauguin, the model for Charles Strickland in "The Moon and Sixpence." For the next 10 years, he journeyed to the Far East, bringing back material for stories and novels.

In 1927, Maugham settled into the fine house on the Riviera in which he lived until his death, surrounded by servants and famous guests. He was rich, he was successful and he could reflect that he had done it all with a Waterman pen and San Remo pads of lined paper, upon which he wrote each morning in his study from 9 to 1.

As Maugham grew older, he became the Grand Old Man of English Letters. The quality of his work declined, but his sales increased. Perhaps he kept writing after his powers had failed, but it is not easy to break a habit of 60 years. Writing was what he liked to do best, and although he belonged to no school, he said that his kind of writing went back to the Neolithic. "From prehistoric times," he wrote, "men blessed with a creative gift have arisen who have by artistic production added adornment to the grim business of living. . . . If the writer of fiction can do that, he has done all that can be reasonably asked of him." END

President's European Schedule Tailored For Network News

Washington—Virtually every one of President Jimmy Carter's activities during his June 19-26 trip to Italy, Yugoslavia, Spain and Portugal has been scheduled with American television in mind. The three commercial networks, as well as Ted Turner's Cable News Network, will be covering Mr. Carter's European trek with four to six camera crews each. And the White House staff is making sure there is no lack of photo opportunities for the voters at home to see their President in action. Mr. Carter's arrival in Rome is scheduled for 10 P.M.—4 P.M. in the Eastern U.S.—just right for taped satellite feeds for the evening network news shows. His meeting with Pope John Paul II is timed early enough on Saturday so that pictures of the two can appear in all the Sunday newspapers. The White House is also promising Presidential appearances during the two days Mr. Carter will spend in Venice meeting with European leaders for economic summit talks.

After Venice, Mr. Carter goes to Belgrade, Yugoslavia. His arrival there on Tuesday is timed to coincide with the networks' morning news shows. Other Carter activities, including a meeting with Yugoslavian leaders and a wreath-laying ceremony at Tito's grave, will be finished in time for the U.S. evening news that day. After a night in Belgrade, the President will go to Madrid, where he will arrive in time to be seen on the early-morning news. His final touchdown, at Andrews Air Force Base, just outside Washington, D.C., is estimated for 6:30 P.M., Thursday, June 26—just in time for a live feed to the nightly news shows.

Chris Chase, the actress-turned-writer who since April 21 has done the thrice-weekly "About People" segments on CBS's Morning news, will be dumped from the show in the near future. "We are going to make a change," says CBS News president Bill Leonard. Although Leonard is not talking, CBS sources say the front-runner to replace Chase is former Who's Who hostess Barbara Howar. Chase is the only one of Morning's five new specialty reporters considered a failure. CBS News brass is said to be happy with the work of meteorologist Valerie Voss, science correspondent Charles Crawford, business analyst Jane Bryant Quinn and media commentator Jeff Greenfield. And, despite the fact that their reports have reduced space for "hard" news stories by about 15 per cent, Morning producer Elliot Bernstein says the show is no less newsy. Anchorman Bob Schieffer agrees: "We're committed to the news here. You won't see spots on how to bake the Easter ham on our show." —John Weisman

Hollywood—In a town noted for mysteries, both real and fictional, the latest guessing game is "Who Shot J.R.?" So many people are asking the question that odds makers on both sides of the Atlantic are taking bets on who plugged Dallas's arch villain J.R. Ewing (Larry Hagman). What all this means, of course, is that CBS expects to profit in the ratings race this fall, when Dallas returns and the mystery is

As We See It

☐ By now, television has reported vividly on many a world calamity, but in the most recent years, no tragedy has hit the TV news-and-documentary audience with more impact than the stark reports of the horror taking place in Cambodia.

In seven short years, through genocide, war, disease and hunger, the population of this small country has been cut almost in half—from 8 million in 1975 to 4.5 million today. Without immediate relief from the outside world, we are informed, another 3 million now face starvation and extinction.

☐ To help procure that relief, more than 30 agencies in this country have recently united to mount a massive campaign to raise $100 million by Oct. 1. State governments, unions, corporations, ad agencies and hundreds of individuals, including Rosalynn Carter; Father Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame; and Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, have enlisted themselves in this humane effort.

The National Association of Broadcasters (whose members include some 679 television stations) believes the Cambodian disaster to be of such magnitude that it is urging all broadcasters to give prime consideration to broadcasting the fund-raising spots that you will be seeing on your set over the next few months. In a letter addressed to the Nation's television stations, NAB's president Vincent T. Wasilewski made an unprecedented plea for their cooperation in this effort. "Normally," he wrote, "NAB does not single out a particular public-service campaign for special consideration. However, owing to the dimensions of this disaster, I feel compelled to make this extraordinary plea."

☐ NAB's president is obviously not exaggerating the need and urgency. We share the industry's hope that the television appeals will produce a generous response from viewers.

The Screening Room

Previews of noteworthy series and specials by TV GUIDE programming editors.
For movie choices, see 'This Week's Movies,' by Judith Crist, in this section.

Summer arrives this week with an agreeable mix of first-run comedy, drama, variety and documentary.

SATURDAY. A study of Chicano gang youths in a Los Angeles barrio, Homeboys (10 PBS) is bound to stir controversy. Some viewers may find it sensitive and sympathetic; others may dismiss it as self-conscious and slanted. But this much is certain: the cinéma-vérité documentary lingers in the mind as a haunting look at life in the shadows of the Sun Belt.

MONDAY. A familiar guest host of The Tonight Show, David Letterman, launches his own talk-variety series in daytime (10 A.M. NBC). Its format was still being kicked around at press time, but Letterman promises plenty of "observational" and offbeat humor. And not having an Ed McMahon-type second banana, he might even occasionally scout the studio audience for a co-host . . . Debby Boone (9 NBC) proves an engaging performer in her first network special, an hour of music and comedy enhanced by guests Bob Hope, Gene Kelly, Greg Evigan and Jose Ferrer.

TUESDAY. Made in Japan. That ubiquitous label sums up the rebirth and success of the Japanese economy in the last 30 years. And while America's productivity still ranks first in the world, its growth rate—unlike Japan's—is said to be "stagnant." Manufacturing methods and worker attitudes in both countries are compared in an NBC White Paper (9:30 P.M.) that asks: "If Japan Can . . . Why Can't We?"

WEDNESDAY. "Less is more," actors are taught. But sometimes less can be more difficult. A case in point is the challenge confronting Irene Worth in a Great Performances staging of Samuel Beckett's "Happy Days" (8 PBS). Worth has the decidedly unhappy role of a woman buried—at first waist-high, and later neck-high—in a mound of earth. It's an absurdist device meant to show life's futility, and yet Worth, immobilized as she is and forced to emote by using only her voice, manages to convey the character's relentless optimism—and turns in an astonishing tour de force . . . A serious amateur photographer pays tribute to some gifted professionals on David Hartman . . . The Shooters (10 ABC). The Good Morning America host profiles photojournalists who sometimes risk life and limb to cover wars and revolutions (such as the bloodshed in El Salvador), but who are also seen on more pleasurable assignments (a shooting session with actress Catherine Deneuve).

THURSDAY. Originally scheduled to go on last fall, Nobody's Perfect (9:30 ABC) makes a belated debut. Ron Moody stars in this comedy as Scotland Yard Inspector Roger Hart, on loan to the San Francisco Police. Hart of the Yard may not be perfect (indeed he's more reminiscent of Inspector Clouseau than Sherlock Holmes), but he does prove intrepid, dealing with a potential suicide and a skittish hijacker.

In some areas network shows may not be seen on the days and at the times indicated. Times are Eastern.

CBS'S BIG SECRET

Thanks for the article on Sunday Morning ["CBS's 'Sunday Morning' Hideaway Remains a Big Secret," May 24]. I rarely miss it, since it's the only news show I enjoy—or watch. Charles Kuralt's low-key delivery, wry humor and historical insights make even bad news palatable. But I most look forward to the last five minutes' "nature spot"—quite an improvement over a last-minute recitation of the daily global disasters. The news that this rare, worthwhile TV show is outside the ratings wars that have turned most TV programming into garbage was the best thing I've heard about TV in a long, long time.

Kathryn C.M. Orr

What Sunday Morning? Here in the Bible belt, Sunday morning is a compound of bad music, righteous religion, tub-thumping preachers, old movies and cartoons. Station managers claim the public would be outraged if religious programming were altered. I'm not sure what basis they have for this judgment, except the preconception that things never change in the Bible belt—that everybody is a church-going fundamentalist. Contrary to the old stereotypes, there are many Jews, Moslems, atheists and even Episcopalians who aren't interested in being forced-fed "that old-time religion" and would be interested in Sunday-morning television programs aimed at viewers whose IQs exceed their belt sizes. When will we get a chance?

Mary M. Gieseler
Memphis, Tenn.

Your article implied that most people would rather lose themselves in the Sunday paper than watch religious programs. That's very sad. Let's stop criticizing religious programs and just be thankful that we still have this freedom.

Joyce Collazo
Bethpage, N.Y.

I find it very sad and disconcerting to learn that there are only about four million of us who appreciate this excellent hour and a half of fine journalism. I truly hope CBS will "hang in there" until those who have not yet discovered Sunday Morning get a chance to share the taste of a first-rate program.

A PLEA AGAINST PLEA BARGAINING

I read the background article on "Plea Bargaining" [May 24]. The process is a far cry from justice. Plea bargaining should not be allowed. A criminal should be charged, tried and punished for the crime that he has committed and be given the maximum sentence. With plea bargaining, the old saying "getting away with murder" is not far from the truth.

THE LAST LAUGH

I read your article, "Situation Comedies: Are They Getting Better—Or Worse?" [May 24] and I have an opinion. They are getting worse by far because they are hastily put together. The characters aren't strong enough and they don't have enough depth.

Mrs. P.B. Lazelle
Fairfield, Cal.

Situation comedies today may be more mature and sophisticated, but what does that have to do with humor? The trouble with situation comedy today is that it isn't funny.

Paul B. Ragsdale Jr.
Marion, Ind.

Are situation comedies getting better—or worse? Let's just say that when Mary, Lou, Ted and Murray left the WJM newsroom [The Mary Tyler Moore Show] and Bob and Emily moved to Oregon [The Bob Newhart Show], I went back to reading.

Sunday, ABC	Romeo and Juliet
Tuesday, NBC	The Steel Cowboy
Tuesday, CBS	The Defection of Simas Kudirka
Wednesday, CBS	Charlotte's Web (Part I)
Wednesday, CBS	The Last Giraffe
Thursday, CBS	Charlotte's Web (Conclusion)
Thursday, NBC	Standing Tall
Friday, ABC	Trouble in High Timber Country

The screen version—the 13th—of Romeo and Juliet bows this network-movie week to offer us at long last authentic teen-aged lovers against a gorgeously authentic background.

Franco Zeffirelli's 1968 film captures the very texture of time and place, creating a 15th-century Verona white with the heat of a blazing sun, aglow with rich and courtly costuming, ablaze with personal passions fed by both temperature and temperament. In contrast, his lovers—Leonard Whiting, 17, and Olivia Hussey, 15—provide a contemporary cool that young people find irresistible. Incidentally, though our Canadian cousins saw the film uncut last week, Romeo's brief nude scene has been trimmed for us American puritans. Milo O'Shea, Michael York, Natasha Parry and Pat Heywood are noteworthy, but Zeffirelli caters primarily to the eye with his richly figured tapestry woven in brilliant color to stunning effect.

A second newcomer, 1973's Five on the Black Hand Side, the ABC Tuesday late movie, is a delightful black-oriented domestic comedy about a father-dominated household wherein the worm turns in feminist fashion. Its refreshment is its exploration of middle-class attitudes and relationships, particularly in a family's loving one another when there's no liking or even living with each other. An excellent cast distinguishes this situation comedy to which you'll find yourself supplying the laugh track.

The third newcomer, Trouble in High Timber Country, unavailable for preview, is the belated pilot for the Yeagers series that ended after two episodes. In it, a family's business is threatened by a conglomerate.

All else is repetition, with some first-rate family fare. The first theatrical repeat is the second of the 1973 animated feature very literally based on E.B. White's Charlotte's Web, the enchanting classic about Wilbur, the lonely piglet, and Charlotte, the literary spider. The second is 1971's T.R. Baskin with Candice Bergen as a sharp-tongued, aphorism-spouting hick-town girl seeking "fame and fortune" in Chicago. James Caan and Marcia Rodd are wasted. The 1977 TV-film of Captains Courageous substitutes story for sentimentality in the Rudyard Kipling yarn of the gruff sea captain (Karl Malden) who makes a man of a rotten rich kid (Jonathan Kahn). And 1979's The Last Giraffe is an appealing fact-based story of a couple's efforts on behalf of the endangered Rothschild giraffe.

Another TV-movie repeat, of 1978's The Defection of Simas Kudirka, offers Alan Arkin heading an equally superb cast in the true story of a Lithuanian seaman's abortive leap to freedom. But even Robert Forster and others can't elevate 1978's Standing Tall to more than a depressing Depression cliché about a small rancher vs. the local biggie. And 1978's The Steel Cowboy is a pretentious bore about a trucker in love with his rig.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on days indicated.

solved. But how will it be solved? Whodunit?

"The script works like a Chinese puzzle," says one insider at Lorimar Productions, the producers of Dallas. "The pieces can be arranged at random to alter the outcome, perhaps without even the actors knowing. They will know what scenes they shot, but not necessarily which ones will be used. Believe me, not even James Bond could solve this case."

CBS programming chief B. Donald (Bud) Grant said he expected the mystery to be solved in three episodes, Sept. 19 (two hours), Sept. 26 and Oct. 3.

The mystery that has been solved, however, is whether or not Larry Hagman will return to Dallas. Last week, Hagman arrived in Big D and began work on the series, suggesting that J.R. Ewing survived his wounds. Even so, Hagman has not signed his new contract with Lorimar. "A lot has happened to Larry since the show began," said a spokesman for the actor, "and his new contract is very complicated. Salary is not the issue. We are talking about such things as merchandising and who owns the name J.R. Everything should be settled shortly."

—Frank Swertlow with Dwight Whitney

New York—David Brinkley, the veteran anchorman and news commentator, is expected to sign on as the new host of NBC's weekly newsmagazine, Prime Time, if the network agrees to strengthen the show's staff. Brinkley would replace Tom Snyder when the show moves yet again, from Saturday to Friday in September. (It originated as Prime Time Sunday last summer.)

Snyder is currently renegotiating his NBC contract to continue as host of the late-night Tomorrow show, although details of the program's newly expanded 90-minute format must still be worked out. —Sally Bedell

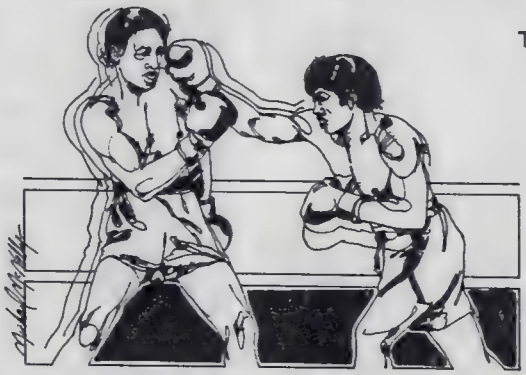
U.S. OLYMPIC TRIALS: BOXING
8 PM (3) (5) (18)



THE FINALS FROM ATLANTA

Special: The Nation's outstanding amateur boxers compete for berths on the 1980 U.S. Olympic team.

Although political considerations have taken away the goal of representing the U.S. at the Moscow games, the 11 winners of tonight's bouts will nonetheless achieve something that no one can take from them—the knowledge that their victories have gained them entry into a select circle whose past members include Muhammad Ali (1960), Joe Frazier (1964), George Foreman (1968) and Ray Leonard (1976).

Eliminations were still going on at press time. Pre-competition favorites included Marvis Frazier (Joe's son), the 1980 AAU heavyweight champion; Bernard Taylor, the 125-pound winner at the 1979 Pan American Games; and Jackie Beard, the AAU's 1980 119-pound titlist.

Commentators in Atlanta include Dick Enberg, Marv Albert and Rolly Schwartz. (Live)

Thousands have paid dollars more for this world-famous knife!

The World's most Luxurious folding hunting knife, NOW Only $6.99!

Here's a classic, folding hunting knife you'll be proud to carry, proud to use out there in the great outdoors. It's a fully-featured knife, 4" long, with a barrel and bolsters forged from a massive block of solid brass. And hardwood handles are rivited to the body to give you a safe, sure grip.

The blade is razor-sharp, hand honed stainless steel, 3¼" long. And, it's probably the safest folding knife ever made. When you snap open the blade, a spring-steel bar locks the blade in place. It simply can't be closed until you release the lock.

This is the knife for hunting and fishing, for camping, for just plain cutting up around the house. Similar knives sell for up to $25, and this exact same knife is nationally advertised for dollars more than our low, low $6.99. And, if you order now, we'll even engrave your initials FREE in a solid brass plate on the side of the knife.

Now! REDUCE WHILE YOU SLEEP and...

WAKE UP TOMORROW MORNING

up to 8 POUNDS THINNER 7½ INCHES SLIMMER

without drugs or exercisers!

Presenting SLUMBERTRIM™ sensational night-time reducing garment that automatically slims you while you sleep. So effective you trim down 10 times faster than leading crash diets!

Sensational reducing news! Science has developed the fastest way yet to slash pounds, trim inches. So easy you do it while you sleep.

Called SLUMBERTRIM, this night time reducing garment works with such speed, you actually wake up the next morning up to 8 pounds lighter — up to 7½ inches slimmer overall — up to a belt notch lighter — a dress size slimmer without drugs, gadgets or insane, exhausting fads. Instead here's all you do: slip into SLUMBERTRIM AND WAKE UP TOMORROW MORNING POUNDS AND INCHES LIGHTER. All the difficult "skinnying down" has been done for you . . . while you sleep.

More Inches Gone In One Evening Than Days Or Weeks Of Endless Suffering With Ordinary Slimming Methods

To give you an idea of SLUMBERTRIM's effectiveness, here are results taken from a startling consumer report:

OVERNIGHT LOSSES

Panelist 17: 8 POUNDS LIGHTER, 7½ INCHES SLIMMER
(Stomach 3½", Hips 1½", Thighs 2½")

Panelist 18: 3 POUNDS LIGHTER, 5½ INCHES SLIMMER
(Stomach 1", Waist 2", Hips 1½", Thigh 1")

Panelist 6: 3 POUNDS LIGHTER, 3½ INCHES SLIMMER
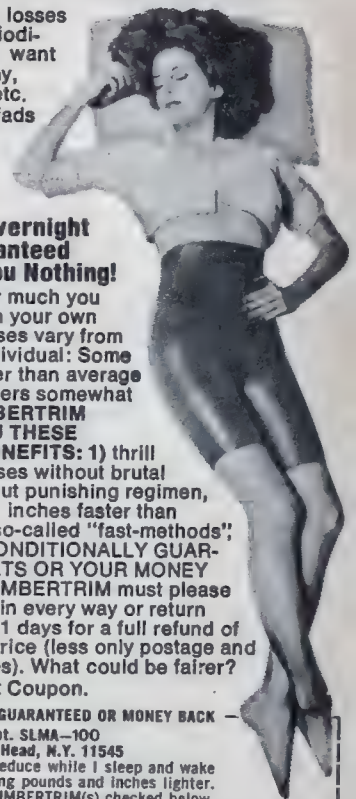
(Stomach 1", Waist 1½", Hips 1")

Average losses: Over 6.4 INCHES and 4.9 POUNDS per panelist participating. Based on 5 evenings of consecutive testing. 9 out of every 10 tested LOST POUNDS OR INCHES!

Automatically Shrinks "Mid-Section" Wake Up The Next Morning Pounds Lighter and Inches Slimmer!

SLUMBERTRIM's special design creates a thermal sauna-like effect. It gently and automatically stimulates your mid-section (where garment is worn) into releasing fluid from thighs, hips, tummy, even derriere, etc. The result: down comes the "bloat", as you wake up the very next morning inches slimmer and pounds lighter. SLUMBERTRIM's the ideal temporary way to super-fast inch losses by using it periodically when you want to shrink tummy, thighs, hips, etc. without drugs, fads or exhausting exercises!



Be Slimmer, Trimmer, Shaplier — Overnight Results Guaranteed Or It Costs You Nothing!

Naturally how much you lose depends on your own physiology. Losses vary from individual to individual: Some will enjoy greater than average reductions... others somewhat less. But SLUMBERTRIM PROMISES YOU THESE IMPORTANT BENEFITS: 1) thrill to overnight losses without brutal exercises, without punishing regimen, 2) lose girth and inches faster than with any of the so-called "fast-methods"; 3) You are UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED RESULTS OR YOUR MONEY BACK. Yes, SLUMBERTRIM must please and delight you in every way or return anytime within 21 days for a full refund of your purchase price (less only postage and handling charges). What could be fairer? Use the No Risk Coupon.

New Electronic Insect Trap

Clears A Tremendous Area Of Flies, Mosquitoes & Gnats!

Draws like a magnet, then zaps bugs dead!

Kills Flying Insects Without Poisons or Sprays! Guaranteed to Protect At Least 20,000 cu. ft. of Patio or Yard!

Approved by Environmental Protection Agency U.S.

Now, after years of research and testing, a major breakthrough in flying insect control for homeowners! At last the same electronic insect trap used by restaurants and stadiums is available in a model for home use.

Looks like a lovely Colonial patio lamp... but the special Black Light bulb is irresistable to flying insects... attracts them like a magnet... then destroys them instantly in the charged electric grid!

This Electronic Insect Trap will clear an area 25 feet in diameter... more than 20,000 cubic feet of backyard or patio. Now, you'll enjoy the outdoors without being bothered by annoying flies, mosquitoes, gnats!

Best of all, you do it without dangerous chemicals or poisons. This Electronic Insect Trap is so safe and effective it's approved by the Environmental Protection Agency of the federal government!

Order yours, now, only $14.99, 2 for $27.99.

DAVID LETTERMAN
10 AM (3) (18)

HERE'S DAVID

David Letterman

Debut: David Letterman, who has been guest host of "The Tonight Show" nearly 30 times, launches his own talk-and-variety series.

It "will have a lot of comedy," Letterman says of the weekday series, "and hopefully that same feeling of spontaneity that Steve Allen's old shows had."

Much of that humor is expected to come from a resident comedy troupe that features Valri Bromfield, Edie McClurg and Bob Sarlatte; from on-the-road pieces by Mark Goldstein, who travels the country by bus; and from film essayist Wil Shriner and writer-comedian Paul Raley.

Still, as Letterman points out, "you can't do [comedy] 90 minutes a day." So there will also be news summaries by Edwin Newman and features from "a rotating stable" of contributors, including Wisconsin Senator William Proxmire (D), writer Jimmy Breslin, soap-opera columnist Jon-Michael Reed and psychotherapist Karen Blaker. (Live; 90 min.)

DEBBY BOONE
9 PM (3) (5) (18)

THE SAME OLD BRAND NEW ME

Special: Gene Kelly, Bob Hope, Greg Evigan and Jose Ferrer join Debby Boone for an hour of music and comedy.

Shepherded by an ethereal voice (Ferrer's), Debby glides through her first TV special, getting a little help from a pair of old pros in the process: Hope offers a crash course on how to do a variety show, while Kelly steps out with Debby to "'S Wonderful," "For Me and My Gal," "Good Mornin'" and "I Got Rhythm."

In other highlights, Boone and Evigan recall their first experiences at dancing with "Real Live Girl" and "Get Ready"; and, in a dramatic segment, Debby plays three different roles as she acts and sings the story of a stage mother determined to make her child into a singing sensation. (60 min.)

IF JAPAN CAN . . . WHY CAN'T WE?

NBC WHITE PAPER
9:30 PM (3) (5) (18)

Special: American productivity—defined simply, says producer Ray Lockhart, as "how much output (product) you get for your input (time and effort)"—is said to be the world's highest, but its growth rate, he says, "is in trouble."

Not so in Japan, where gross national product is 13 times what it was in 1950 and is still rising. Surveying conditions in a number of highly automated Japanese plants, the program links their success to strict quality-control methods, harmonious labor-management relations and employee benefits that can range from exercise breaks to "lifetime work guarantees."

In the U.S., agriculture is cited as a "marvel of productivity," but industry is said to have had a decline in innovation, research and development, and capital investment. These trends are assessed by experts—as are the implications of what one Commerce Department official calls "[our continuing] to consume far beyond our means." The program (being edited at press time) also examines the impact of Federal regulations on technology, and concludes with a profile of statistician W. Edwards Deming, who says: "you get gains in productivity only because people work smarter, not harder."

Lloyd Dobyns is the reporter. (90 min.)

GREAT PERFORMANCES
8 PM 15 (KET)

HAPPY DAYS

Irene Worth portrays a desperately cheerful woman with little to be cheery about in this 1961 tragicomedy by Samuel Beckett.

Essentially, "Happy Days" is a nonstop soliloquy delivered by the middle-aged Winnie, who, in Act I, is buried in a mound of earth up to her waist, and in Act II up to her neck. Her garrulous monologue is directed toward her husband Willie (George Voskovec), who crawls about on all fours behind the mound, responding infrequently and at times unintelligibly to her.

In Beckett's view, the universe is incomprehensible. Thought is pointless, action useless, and time a meaningless succession of events. Yet "Happy Days" is not a solemn work and Winnie, unlike her nihilistic creator, is absurdly optimistic, gamely trying to keep back the sorrow that "keeps breaking through."

Andrei Serban directed this production for Joseph Papp's Public Theater. (90 min.)

Gerald S. O'Loughlin

Somerset Maugham's short story "Vessel of Wrath" inspired this drama about a strait-laced missionary named Martha (Sandy Dennis) and her efforts to reform a drunken womanizer named Ginger Wilson (Gerald S. O'Loughlin).

It's set during the 1920s in the West Indies, where Martha and Wilson are thrown together one night when the boat they are traveling on develops engine trouble. Contrary to her fears, Martha awakes the next morning to find herself safe and covered by Wilson's blanket. With that, she resolves to bring out the good she finds in him.

But the missionary's attempts meet with failure, until she volunteers to care for the sick during a cholera outbreak on a neighboring island—and asks the governor to send Wilson along with her. Since Ginger is about to be jailed for his part in a barroom brawl, the governor acquiesces and sentences him to time with Martha instead.

ON BEING A CHICANO IN AMERICA

Special: Inside a Los Angeles barrio.

This documentary tours the turf of young Chicano gang members ("homeboys") who live in a battered freeway-bordered housing project called Cuatro Flats. There, naturalistic segments photographed with a hand-held camera and unaccompanied by any narration follow the homeboys on their day-to-day activities and listen as they voice their frustrations: anger at alleged police harassment, resentment toward the school system and bitterness over the unavailability of local employment.

But more than a socioeconomic tract, the program personalizes its subjects in several compelling (and seemingly spontaneous) moments. In one, an artist's interpretation through his colorfully surrealistic murals articulates homeboy pride in the face of inter-barrio battles. In another, one youth's anguished monologue about self-identity during a rap session underscores the group's desperation. ("How," he asks, "do we fit into American society, just being ourselves?") And the concluding chronicle of a homeboy's church wedding subtly reflects the tension between accepting responsibility and leaving the brotherhood of the gang. (90 min.)

'I have a terrific fantasy life'

Despite her reputation as a workaholic, Stefanie Powers would rather be on safari

By Sheila Benson

"Give me those great big eyes, Stefanie," the husky redheaded boom-mike man croons to a still form in a zip-up oxygen tent. "Never mind the cheeks, never mind the lips, you can keep the body; I just want a glance from those eyes. . . ."

The face in intensive care looks up with an intensive stare and a small, moderately rude noise. At the same time, Tom Mankiewicz, one of Hart to Hart's directors, looks from his camera's point of view at his star with what he attempts to pass off as professional detachment. "There are 600 moving parts to that face," he says.

The parts may move, but they show few signs of wear and tear. What are politely called smile lines have yet to settle around Stefanie Powers' brown eyes. If love is supposed to be the ultimate cosmetic, looking at Powers you could make quite a case that success also carries a tangible aura all its own.

It is success she's tasting at long last. Powers has wanted to cross into that world and its perks since her first series, The Girl from U.N.C.L.E., and that was 1966. The Feather and Father Gang brought her no closer, nor did the miniseries Washington: Behind Closed Doors. Now, however, it's within sight: audiences seem to love watching Stefanie and Robert Wagner court and spark, nip and nuzzle their way through otherwise largely forgettable mystery-adventures, watchdogged by the greatest pit bull of them all, Lionel Stander, as their chauffeur Max. Some weeks, more people were watching high life and love chez Hart than pioneer-family togetherness in Little House on the Prairie, the family trials of Eight Is Enough, or even the offbeat comedy of Mork & Mindy.

What does Stefanie Powers bring to Jennifer Hart? More than anything, the gift of professionalism, the ability to pace herself to the rigors of a series. Powers knows, within millimeters, what she's doing and how much energy to expend doing it. Her years as a self-styled workaholic, the years of television shows back to back, the movies, plays on the straw-hat circuit and in repertory have heightened her craft.

That same professionalism has, on occasion, made her impatient with anyone less efficient. Director Alex March, after calling her marvelously pliable, a joy to work with, always prepared, always receptive and a generous actress, chuckled at the memory of a Sunday-night mystery show the two did some years ago. "She can be intolerant as hell if you're winging it. I saw her tell an actor off in no uncertain terms, so that he was totally destroyed in front of a crew. He'd been fooling around all morning and finally she'd had it. Whooh, did she tell him off! This gorilla—he was a big man—was just destroyed."

Series co-executive producer Leonard Goldberg, a lean, handsomely gray-bearded man whose office wall is enlivened by framed crayon drawings by his kids, thinks that Powers brings "importance" to a scene. "When she's speaking, you listen," he says. "Her contribution is unique: we needed a mature woman, not a little girl, who had great intelligence, style, class, a good sense of high humor, was a good actress and had believability. Also, it didn't hurt if she was pretty. Our situation is unusual: both Powers and Wagner were our absolutely first choices. What we banked on was a relationship. When you looked at the Harts, you smiled. They made you feel good. Stefanie is nice. Women like her. There are actresses other women resent, who are overly sensual, not sensitive or vulnerable. She touches you."

One of the most elaborate Hart to Harts yet is in its last three days of shooting. They've just come back from Vail, Colo., where they shot snowmobile chases, ski-lift scenes, fatal ski runs and horse-drawn sleigh rides; between the show's wardrobe and what the cast and crew have dragged home from Vail, there's enough nouveau-Western gear—boots, coats, hats, belts—to make Ralph Lauren's eyes mist over. The hot-tub love scene, a sauna scene and ski-lodge dance will be shot with less expensive overhead on the Spelling/Goldberg sound stages at 20th Century-Fox.

At the lunch break, Powers heads for one of the trailers that series stardom confers, the one affectionately marked "Starbaby," and straight for a baby of her own. Nesting among the towels in her bathroom cabinet is B.B., her bush baby, a tiny, irresistible, monkeylike animal with rounded amber eyes, a chinchilla's soft coat, the delicate round ears of a field mouse and the attack of a circus aerialist. B.B. →

hurls himself fearlessly from shoulder to curtain, from lunch plate to a visitor's lap, his sound like a gurgling chitter. As she nuzzles him, Powers expertly removes his mouth from her wrist. Mrs. Hart's long-sleeved turtleneck neatly covers Miss Powers' love bites and scratches from B.B.

She edges into conversation, friendly but detached. First she outlines, with mental map tacks, The Trip, the one she's going to make at the first Hart break. Hong Kong to Burma, Borneo, Thailand and finally a train up into China. She comes more alive as she thinks about it.

"I have a terrific fantasy life, a wonderful sense of imagination and total childlike curiosity. These are the good parts. The fact that they drive me as much as they do, manipulate me, is a real problem. Because when I start on this trip, there will be a point, two or three weeks into it, where I won't think what's 'home' or where 'home' is. And when I get to that point, which happens every single time I leave, I don't care if I ever come back.

"It's not regenerative in the sense that I get enough and come back and say, 'God, that really did me good.' I never get enough of it. And when I get back, I get depressed. That's a terrible thing. To think that you're coming home to all the things you've worked for—relationships you have—and you're not satisfied."

She takes a mouthful of chicken-and-avocado salad, hands a piece to B.B. and continues.

"The last year has been a lot of hard work. The greatest gratification is that there's been some success. I've been in this business since I was 15, and this is the first success I've had. Now I know the difference in the attitude . . . in your own credibility in the industry. Now it is possible that I might be able to get my own projects off the ground."

Directing? "Producing. Creatively producing. I'd like to have more of a hand in things, working with the writing, the director, helping to shape it."

What does she see herself doing in 10 years? "I don't," the answer comes back firmly. "I don't make those prognostications. What I would not be doing is a television series. I would hope by then I would be able to act when I want, rather than to act to live."

She has, since 1973, been keeping company with William Holden, whom she met at a celebrity tennis match. They and two others have a business importing art and artifacts from the East. What has this relationship taught her? She says she prefers not to discuss it. But her next words, and the intensity with which she says them, are a comment of their own.

"I once heard a psychologist say something that made great sense: 'God save us from relationships based on need.' How often do you hear, 'Oh well, opposites attract; she needs what he has'? What about adult choice? What about two people who decide to be together who really don't need each other? They can get along very well by themselves; they choose to be together because they want to be together, without this interdependence that eventually creates a weakness, because one or the other outgrows that dependency, and that's it."

Her words bring to mind the comments of Robert Wagner. After the usual testimonial to Powers—terrific sense of humor, complete professional—Wagner said admiringly: "Stefanie's got a little circus going on there in her head. You have the sense that she can get out of anything. If she has to run through reeds or swim up a river, she'll be there; you never have to look around for her—you always feel her presence."

And although she may not speak directly about Holden, the 62-year-old actor has, on occasion, spoken about her. To Rodrick Mann of The Los Angeles Times, Holden said, "It's tough finding a woman who can travel with you, who will put up with all the problems and hassles. Stef does it wonderfully; I've taken her out on safari, sleeping under the stars, and she's loved it. Most of my life I've had to take care of people, but with her I don't have to do anything. How many women would accompany a man upriver in northern New Guinea and wind up with dengue fever and not complain? Not many."

Groaning about her "tonnage" (which seems gratuitous, since at 117 pounds her 5-foot-7 frame is slim as an eel), Powers bends upside down, brushes her thick auburn hair briskly, relines her lipstick and is off. It has taken her less time to get ready for six hours in front of a camera than it takes most women to get ready to schlump off to the supermarket.

The next day's shooting is an intricate sequence at the ski lodge, with the cast's five principals and a large number of extras assembled. Behind the scenery, it looks like a civil-defense emergency: the young dancing extras, vainly fighting the old ennui, litter the carpeted backstage flat on their stomachs. They're saving themselves as though they were about to do the opening number from "All That Jazz."

During the wait, Powers thinks more about the question of success.

"I don't want to become public property. I enjoy my anonymity, which of course one loses more and more as one achieves success. Now a layman might say—I've even heard my mother say this and she knows the business—'What is all this? Now they've gotten what they want, they want to be left alone?'

"Well, it may appear that way. But for a start, there are certain things you're required to do that embarrass you. There's a thing called the People's Choice Award, and they have awarded it to me. Now, I will tell this to you in complete candor and at the risk of → sounding like a complete idiot and opening my mouth where I shouldn't, but I don't know where the People's Choice Award comes from. I've never seen a survey. All I know is every once in a while a new award is invented so that somebody can sell a TV special. What is it if it's not a hype? Now, I think it's very nice and lovely, and I've never won anything but a radio once in a raffle, but I had a tremendous amount of difficulty explaining why I didn't want to go [to accept the award] and now it appears that if I don't go . . . well, it's the road of least resistance to go, I find."

Her voice is soft, but she's only warming up. "I didn't get into this to see my photograph on the cover of a magazine. I like to act. If I wanted to have my picture on the cover of a magazine, then I would have been a model, but I don't look like that. I feel uncomfortable as an actress on the cover of a magazine. That's where a model belongs. And I feel uncomfortable watching a model doing an actress's job. I don't think that everyone who throws a football or takes a pretty picture should be lumped in the same category as actors. It sort of lessens the professionality."

On the question of age, she's even more impassioned: "We've become victimized by numbers. If you put a number on a blackboard and say, 'That's how many years I have been on Earth,' it doesn't mean that. What it means is totally different. Everyone says the same sort of garbage to each other: 'Well, we're not getting any younger. My God, I guess I'm going to have to have a face lift or a few nips and tucks.' We laugh about it, joke about it, but each day we put ourselves deeper and deeper, into this by associating it with ourselves, by accepting any facet of it. It's a lot of work to keep yourself ahead of this thing."

Told that women like her, she smiles, pleased. "I think it's the greatest compliment. I'm not sure what they see —or don't see, but it may be . . . part of themselves, without a threat. Thank God we've evolved from that. Now women can look at each other without looking from their head to their toes, but it's taken time. I never had any girl friends when I was growing up. I love my women friends now; we have great fun. I'd rather be with my women friends than my men friends now."

They're ready for her. Back she goes, the women extras watching her from the edges of their eyes, the way members of the corps de ballet watch the prima ballerina. Studying, studying.

Gravel-voiced Lionel Stander, waiting patiently in his trailer to be called, says about his costar: "Steffie's beauty is not from genetics; it's because she's talented, because there's something going on in that brain. Anyone can be great playing great roles—no sweat. I've done it: Shakespeare, Chekhov, Brecht. Go ahead and be great" (with a wicked chuckle) "wid' ordinary lines. That takes real technique. She's a very skillful actress, very. I'm delighted for her at the success of the show. It came at the right time, because if this had bombed she'd have been in real trouble. When a woman hits around 40 in this town, I don't have to tell you what happens. The whole setup is antifemale. It's very tough for women in this racket because the power's in the hands of men."

Ralph Senensky, who has directed her in three episodes, has come by the set. He watches, his curly hair a gray aureole around his face.

"She's a love, that one. She's strong, she's unafraid; if she gets into something she doesn't back down. She's a very complicated lady, far more complex than Jennifer ever has a chance to be. Just by the nature of TV, it can't encompass anyone as complex as Stefanie." END

TURKEY AND STUFFING WITHOUT GUILT

One evening, as Polly Morgen sat nibbling on a carrot, a vision appeared: juicy turkey drenched in velvety gravy over a mountain of stuffing.

Next thing Polly knew, she

was tearing the tin foil off congealed corned beef and marshmallowed yams. And you know what? Ms. Morgen doesn't even like yams.

Fad diets are so boring, they drive you to cheating. Guilt sets in. You feel so bad, you abandon the diet completely. Till the next time.

Weight Watchers Frozen Meals can help break this self-defeating pattern. All of our 28 dishes are specially made for a sensible weight loss program. And all of them have an extra something you never dreamed you could eat without feeling guilty.

Like the thick, brown mushroom gravy on our beefsteak. Sublime lobster sauce or lemony bread crumbs on our fish. Piquant soy sauce spiked with garlic on our chicken livers and onions. Velvety gravy and stuffing with our turkey. There's no tricks. No MSG. We simply start off with the finest well-trimmed meat and fish and serve them in a sensible portion.

Then we enhance them with rich-tasting yet ingredient-conscious sauces.

So throw out your corned beef, Polly! Wash those yams down the drain!

You've got Weight Watchers Meals on your side now. And after a few weeks on your program you might just see that side getting smaller.

When is 'Hellcats of the Navy' a political broadcast?

In Presidential-election years, broadcasters run an obstacle course of Government regulations

By Don Kowet

According to the Federal Election Commission, by April of this year 186 candidates, most of them very minor indeed, had registered with the FEC to enter the 1980 Presidential slugfest. As usual, many of these contenders were expending as much energy complaining as campaigning, demanding all their legal rights, including, especially, equal exposure on local and network TV.

The referee in this quadrennial quarrel between political candidates and TV broadcasters is the Federal Communications Commission. Its Marquis of Queensberry rules are called Fairness Doctrine and Equal Opportunities. To the FCC's critics, Fairness Doctrine and Equal Opportunities seem more like the Marquis de Sade's rules of torment.

The Fairness Doctrine (whose seed was sown in the Radio Act of 1927) obliges TV broadcasters to cover "controversial public issues." "The main 'controversial public issue' in any Presidential election," explains Milton Gross, chief of the FCC's Fairness/Political Broadcasting division, "is: who shall be elected?"

The FCC leaves it to the broadcasters to decide which candidates' views on "who shall be elected" are the "significant" ones. But few TV stations (and no TV networks) are likely to find the viewpoint of Prophet Elijah, the 35-year-old night watchman/candidate from New York City, significant enough to telecast. So, again in 1980, the impact of the Fairness Doctrine will be to keep President Carter and Kennedy and Reagan on television —and minor candidates off it.

The Fairness Doctrine's "personal-attack" rule compels a TV broadcaster to offer individuals attacked on the air free access to respond. This personal-attack rule doesn't cover assaults launched "by candidates or their campaign associates on other candidates or their associates." But candidates attacked by their peers keep trying to use it to get on TV anyway.

Recently, for instance, the FCC got a telephone call from an irate Presidential candidate. He complained that he had been attacked on a local TV station. "Someone had said that the candidate was running on an honesty platform," says the FCC's Milton Gross.

"If you knew me," said the outraged candidate, "you'd know I couldn't be running on an honesty platform. I've spent the last 30 years in jail." The FCC was able to convince him that the personal-attack rule didn't apply.

"We televise an editorial in prime time every night and in some 22 daytime periods each week," says Richard Hughes, senior vice president of New York's WPIX, explaining why the vast majority of TV stations do not use editorials to endorse candidates. "If we were to decide now to endorse a candidate on Nov. 3, 1980, the night before the election, we might be required to notify scores, if not all, of the Presidential candidates and be prepared, at worst, to give over to them every single prime-time editorial period from now through Nov. 2 to satisfy the political-editorialization rule."

Proponents of that rule, of course, think it's a good idea to prevent stations from endorsing candidates. They argue that an unfettered businessman/broadcaster might be biased in favor of a conservative candidate, or in favor of an incumbent already laboring on the broadcaster's behalf in Washington.

"We might be unfair, we might be biased, but so are newspapers," says NBC vice chairman and former CBS News chief Dick Salant. To Salant and most of his TV-news colleagues, the Fairness Doctrine turns TV journalists into "second-class citizens," compared with their brethren in print. And then the 1934 Communications Act's "reasonable-access" rules and its "equal-opportunities" provisions deprive TV stations of basic rights.

The reasonable-access rule, which gives the FCC the power to revoke a broadcaster's license "for willful or repeated failure to allow reasonable access" to legally qualified candidates for Federal office was "clarified" by the Commission in July 1978. That →

FCC update made it impossible for TV stations to refuse to sell prime-time commercial spots to candidates, as some had been doing. In December 1979, FCC rules led to the 1980 election campaign's first broadcast-law controversy. A U.S. Court of Appeals upheld the FCC when it ruled that the TV networks acted "unreasonably" when they refused to sell a half hour of prime time to the Carter-Mondale Committee, for a documentary on President Carter to kick off his candidacy.

With that court decision as an overture, the traditional equal-opportunities comic opera was set to start.

"Equal opportunities" (often referred to as "equal time," although the 1934 Act never uses that phrase) means, according to the FCC, that if a candidate obtains time on a TV station, other candidates for the same office may obtain "equal opportunities" on the station. It means that the aggrieved candidate gets not only the same number of minutes, but an audience comparable both in size and demographics.

It was the equal-opportunities provision that compelled WGTU (Traverse City, Mich.) to offer 30 minutes of time to Sen. Howard Baker, after the station had recklessly broadcast a 1957 movie called "Hellcats of the Navy," starring Ronald Reagan.

The FCC has exempted from these equal-opportunities strictures nightly news shows and Sunday interviews (Meet the Press, etc.), plus on-the-spot coverage of news events, such as press conferences and debates among the candidates. Exempt, too, are CBS's 60 Minutes, ABC's Good Morning America and NBC's Today (the FCC won't rule on ABC's 20/20 or NBC's Prime Time Saturday until a candidate files a complaint).

News documentaries are exempt only "if the appearance of the candidate is incidental." Which means, in effect, virtually never.

But almost every other regularly recurring TV news format is exempt from equal-opportunities restraints. So which TV programs have the candidates been filing complaints against this year? The very programs that the FCC has already ruled are exempt.

When, in January, NBC's Meet the Press rejected Gov. Jerry Brown's plea that he (and Sen. Ted Kennedy) be included in an interview scheduled with President Carter, Brown filed an equal-opportunities complaint against the program. It was rejected. Kennedy, frustrated by President Carter's Rose Garden strategy, has submitted similar complaints, alleging in essence that the President uses press conferences for campaigning. (Likewise rejected.) President Carter's reluctance to venture out of the Rose Garden also aborted a series of planned Democratic-candidate debates.

However, during the fall general election, the League of Women Voters Education Fund plans to present three nationally televised debates, each featuring the Democratic and Republican Presidential nominees. If the League's Presidential Debates Advisory Committee, which includes former FCC chairman Newton Minow, advises the group to add independent candidate John Anderson, then several other nominees (including those of the Libertarian and Citizens Parties) will probably petition for platform space too.

At the beginning of June, Minow and his staff were still pondering how many Presidential nominees should debate. The FCC (falling once more down the rabbit hole into the Alice-in-Wonderland garden where political-broadcast laws grow) already had decided how few should debate.

"We ruled," says the FCC's Milton Gross, "that when there's a debate scheduled between two candidates and one of them doesn't appear—it's no longer a debate." END

Review

By Robert MacKenzie

LETTERS, I GET LETTERS

After slaving over a hot picture tube all day, there is nothing like a refreshing dip into the mailbag and some bracing sentiments from one's fans.

For instance, Joe Basona of Pelham, N.Y., admirably succinct, sends along this: "Review of Robert MacKenzie and his review: Nothing worth talking about. Trash, trash, trash."

He who disheth it out should be prepared to taketh it, but some correspondents tend to dwell on personal elements, like my ancestry, IQ and physical characteristics. Jo Anne Powell of St. Helena, Cal., believes she knows why I do not publish my photograph. "If I were that man I couldn't show my face in public. After all the degrading remarks made of Robert Conrad and others, I wouldn't be surprised if he has a very short friend list." Well, it is short, but Robert Conrad is on it. He liked the review. I don't publish my photo because of my embarrassing resemblance to Robert Redford.

My comment on the "bun shots" in The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo and other pastoral comedies struck a chord with many readers. Marcia Koenig of Queens writes: "Why all the emphasis on rear ends? The jeans and girdle ads and the redneck comedies are all pushing tushies. I thought the depths of bad taste had been reached, but this time TV has bottomed out."

I angered feminists when I ventured that women might enjoy Knots Landing more than men because, when the plots drag, they can check the characters' taste in drapes and kitchen appliances. Laura Cowles of Minneapolis writes: "Congratulations. You win the Barefoot and Pregnant Award for male arrogance. Just in case you haven't noticed, some of us are not only cooking the bacon but bringing it home. We don't have time to ogle drapes. Why don't you go back to the kitchen? You can't write, so maybe you can learn to cook."

That stung a little, but what really cut deep was the editor who pointed out that "drapes" is very non-U. "Draperies" is OK. "Curtains" even, but anyone who says "drapes" is strictly a low-class boob. Some of these editors think they are awfully smart.

For Tenspeed and Brownshoe I essayed a review in the style of a private-eye novel. This undammed a flood of creative writing by readers. A typical burst of prose came from Jeff Kramer of Los Angeles:

"It was one of those nights when the air is as thick as a Sheriff Lobo fan's skull. I slipped into the magazine store. It was cool as a morgue inside. But all the corpses were standing up, chewing gum. I scanned the racks, steely-eyed. It was there. TV GUIDE. Slow and easy, I checked the back page. A review of Tenspeed and Brownshoe. A great show—slick as a greased snake, cool as an IRS man's handshake. The review was good. Too good. I smiled, slipping the mag back into the rack. They think I'm going to shell out 40 cents to find out what I already know. They've got another think coming."

There were other letters in that vein, all delightful. They're talented out there. Too talented. END

I know I do. And I'm not talking about football. My wife, Marianne, and I grew up in Cincinnati. But we didn't really see it from the tourist's point of view until we started bringing the kids back for visits. Now, even we're amazed at everything there is to do.

We've spent hours roaming through the excellent art museums and enjoying Cincinnati's wonderful Symphony, Ballet, Opera, and May Festival. And one of our favorite things is to pack a picnic lunch, go up to one of the beautiful city parks that overlook the Ohio, and just watch life floating by on the river.

Speaking of the river, you sports fans already know that Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium is the home of the world famous Reds baseball team. Tickets are almost always available, so whenever we're up during the spring or summer, we plan on catching some Reds action. Cincinnati's big on pro football, too. And now that I'm off the field, I'm looking forward to seeing the Bengals live.

"YOU'LL LOVE PLAYING IN CINCINNATI."

Roger Staubach
Former Quarterback, Dallas Cowboys

Cincinnati's also known for some other Bengals... the extremely rare white Bengal tigers that have been successfully bred at the Cincinnati Zoo. That's another "must" on our itinerary. It's called "the Midwest's liveliest zoo" and considered to be one of the finest in the world.

If the kids are in the mood to ride a "real" Beast, we head for Kings Island, the giant theme park just north of town. Their Beast is the biggest, fastest roller coaster in the world. And right next door we can take in the National College Football Hall of Fame.

At the end of a great day, there's a wide choice of places to relax, from convenient downtown hotels, to suburban resort centers, to budget motels. And the hardest thing about finding an outstanding meal in Cincinnati is deciding which one to choose. One of only 13 restaurants in the country to receive the Mobil 5 Star Award is located here. And there are 6 restaurants that rate 4 Stars.

I could go on about all the ways we love to play in this town. But I think an even better idea is for you to mail in this coupon or see your travel agent. And discover for yourself how much fun is waiting for you when you meet Cincinnati.

MEET CINCINNATI

For more information on the great places to go and things to do in Cincinnati, fill in this coupon and mail it to: Lois Smith, 200 W. 5th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio 45202. Or stop in and see your local travel agent.

"Inside the Third Reich," the memoirs of ALBERT SPEER, ADOLF HITLER's architect, will be adapted as a six-hour TV-movie for the 1981-1982 season on ABC. A convicted war criminal, Speer was imprisoned in West Berlin for many years . . . Crime and Punishment, a four-part miniseries based on the DOSTOEVSKI novel, will begin the 10th-anniversary season of Masterpiece Theatre, Sept. 28 on PBS. JOHN HURT stars as the guilt-ridden Raskolnikov, TIMOTHY WEST of Edward the King plays the magistrate and SIAN PHILLIPS of I, Claudius is Katherine Ivanova. Pride and Prejudice, an adaptation of the JANE AUSTEN classic, will follow Crime and Punishment. In the cast are ELIZABETH GARVIE, DAVID RINTOUL and MARSHA FITZALAN. Both are BBC-Time/Life coproductions.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN is the latest in the growing list of film stars whose lives are the material of TV-movies. Marble Arch Productions and NBC are developing Chaplin's biography . . . The relationship between LORNE GREENE and PERNELL ROBERTS, best described as chilly during Pernell's later days on Bonanza, warmed up when the two guest-starred in a segment of Vega$ filmed recently in Hawaii . . . Like the other networks, CBS will need replacements for canceled series this fall, and one possible entry is "Jake's Way," a movie pilot costarring BOB FULLER and SLIM PICKENS. The film will be telecast later this month and, Fuller told us, "It's a contemporary Western. I play a sheriff in a small Texas town and Slim is the town's ex-sheriff and my mentor."

NBC's Friday Night Fights will telecast at least three bouts during August. DICK ENBERG and SUGAR RAY LEONARD are the co-hosts for the matches. Leonard recently signed a contract with Home Box Office to be a narrator for sports events, and a representative of the company at affiliate and press functions . . . HBO also announced an agreement with Walt Disney Productions for a Showcase series of movies, including "The Black Hole," "Bedknobs and Broomsticks," "The World's Greatest Athlete" and "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again."
